(b) Read the following passage and answer the questions carefully.

The other day we heard someone smilingly refer to poets as dreamers. Now it is accurate to refer to poets as dreamers, but it is not discerning to infer, as this person did, that the dreams of poets have no practical value beyond the realm of literary diversion. The truth is that poets are just as practical as people who build bridges or look into microscopes; and just as close as reality and truth. Where they differ from the logician and the scientist is in the temporal sense alone; they are ahead of their time, whereas logicians and the scientists are abreast of their time. We must not be so superficial that we fail to discern the practicableness of dreams.

Dreams are the sunrise streamers heralding a new way of scientific progress, another forward surge. Every forward step man takes in any field of life, is first taken along the dreamy paths of imagination. Robert Fulton did not discover his steamboat with full steam up, straining at a hawser then scientific wisdom converted a picture in the mind into a reality of steel and wood at some Hudson River dock; first he dreamed the steamboat, he and other dreamers, and. The automobile was not dug out of the ground like a nugget of gold; first men dreamed the automobile and afterward, long afterward, the practical- minded engineers caught up with what had been created by winging fantasy.

- (i) Are poets dreamers? In what sense?
- (ii) Is the poet a practical man? In what way?
- (iii) Are dreams, according to the author useful to world? Why?

6.(a) As a Marketing Manager of Ajanta cements submit a report on the promotion of sales and launching of new products to the Director, Marketing of your company.

(b) Read the passage and answer the questions.

Scientists observe that as the creatures of primeval seas died, their bodies sank into the mud and silt of the ocean floor. Here the sea currents covered them with more mud and silt. As time passed, the pressure of the water and upper layers of silt slowly hardened and formed the sediments into rock. They do not, however say, how exactly the pressure of the water and the upper layers of the silt slowly hardened the remains of the creatures into rock. They merely state that the bodies of the dead creatures decayed and disappeared but the outline of their forms was preserved forever in the rock.

Scientists assure us that pressures from the inside of the earth slowly bent the rock in places lifted out of the water. What was once the sea-bottom often became dry land? By looking at these uplifted rocks, scientists can tell us that fossils of the ancient animals came to be preserved, in what they call the 'picture book of rocks'.

We now understand how layers of the fossil-bearing rocks have been piled upon one another for millions of years. Scientists have proved why the oldest layers are to be found at the bottom and newer ones at the top. They have also shown that they can place the fossils in their proper time by observing the sequence of the rocks. This gives them a clear and accurate history of sea-life, going back hundreds of millions years.

Questions:

(i) What happened to the bodies of the sea animals when they died?

(ii) How do scientists prove that certain types of creatures existed in the sea millions of years ago?

(iv) How are fossils formed?

- 6.(a) As an Assistant Marketing Manager of Samson's Electronics, write a report to the Managing Director, about the decline of sales due to the bad quality of the products resulting in business loss. Suggest some steps to improvise the situation.

- (b) Read the passage and answer the questions.

A stout old lady was walking with her basket down the middle of a street in Petrograd to the great confusion of the traffic and with no small peril to herself. It was pointed out to her that the pavement was the place for pedestrians, but she replied: 'I'm going to walk where I like. We've got liberty now.' It did not occur to the dear old lady that if liberty entitled the pedestrian to walk down the middle of the road, then the end of such liberty would be universal chaos. Everybody would be getting in everybody else's way and nobody would get anywhere. Individual liberty would have become social anarchy. There is a danger of the world getting liberty-drunk in these days like the old lady with the basket, and it is just as well to remind ourselves of what the rule of the road means. It means that in order that the liberties of all may be preserved, the liberties of everybody must be curtailed. When the policeman, say, at Piccadilly Circus steps into the middle of the road and puts out his hand, he is the symbol not of tyranny, but of liberty. You may not think so. You may, being in a hurry, and seeing your car pulled up by this insolence of office, feel that your liberty has been outraged. How dare this fellow interfere with your free use of the public highway? Then, if you are a reasonable person, you will reflect that if he did not interfere with you, he would interfere with no one, and the result would be that Piccadilly Circus would be a maelstrom that you would never cross at all. You have submitted to a curtailment of private liberty in order that you may enjoy a social order which makes your liberty a reality.

Questions

- (i) Why was the old lady walking on the road?
- (ii) What could have been the end of the liberty?
- (iii) What is the meaning of the 'rules of the road'?
- (iv) How will social anarchy happen?
